Few Readers Who Do

Not Enjoy Pictures There is a Chinese proverb, the purport of which is: "One picture is worth a thousand words," says Rear Admiral Snow in the Antiquarian Magazine. A reason for this saying, centuries old, may lie in the fact that the written language of the Chinese peoples, though truly pictorial can only be mastered by prodigious exercise of the memory. However out of perspective are their drawings and pictures, it is much easier to gain an iden of a situation from one of their pictures than it is to commit to memory the Chinese ideographs used to describe the episode.

The oriental people are not, however, alone in their estimation of the value of illustrations as a means of quickly conveying information. Any occidental who has observed at all carefully the action of children upon picking up a new book, or running through a favorite old one, must have remarked their inclination, first and last, is to took through the pages and, from the pictures scanned with concentrated attention, fix in their minds the persons, places and incidents about which they are going to read.

We are often told that "zeown ups" are very much like children wearing n mask. In looking at pictures or old prints we older people do gain useful information and experience much pleasure; we are like children.

Cold Responsible for Error of Stevenson's?

Robert Louis Stevenson never was in exampathy with those to whom know and Ice brought loy. During a cold spell in Edinburgh he wrote: "I feel fit for little clse besides prayer. can not be comforted; my wits are frozen. . Life is an amuse-ment totally uncultable for winter, I place a claim to immortality on that plirase. How can you inled about Shelley? You wouldn't If you were as cold as I are."
It may have been this loathing of cold which, by some psychological twist, betrayed Stovenson's wita into bls worst literary blunder, the Manchester Guardian suggests. When Marcel Schowb sought permission to translate "The Musier of Ballantrae," Stevenson implored him to make a rariation in the original.

"Fray do not let Mrs. Henry thrust the sword up to the bilt in the frozen ground," he wrote; "one of my inconceivable blunders, an exaggeration to stugger lingo. Say she sought to thrust it into the ground."

Overpopulation

Nature sees to it, it seems, that the world isn't overpopulated. The caretess and the unsanitary, any biologist will tell you, perish. The heaviest, loughest producers, the respect for instance, are given no flower or fruit. nor are they callble. So man despises them and trouples them under doot. Here is something to ponder: When the Gulf stream meets the Polar current, the miscropic beings in the sea weed carried by the current freeze, dle and siok. The herring eat them. Each herring lays 70,000 oggs. The cod cat the berries. Each cod lars Of Man ergs. The stargeon cal the cod. Early in the present century two experimental date orthards were established in the Coachella valley, Call fernia; one at Mecca, in 1991, by the berraw of plant industry of the United States Department of Agriculture in cooperation with the northwiteral department of the University of Call formle, and the other at India, in 1807 by the bureau of plant industry. GIGANTIC MERCHANDISE MART TO BE TWICE SIZE OF WORLD'S LARGEST BUSINESS BUILDING

New Project for Chicago's Great Central Market to Cost $30,000,000—Involves the Greatest Single Development of Air Rights in the West.

Foremost Manufacturers, Wholesalers and Importers Will Be Housed Under One Roof in New Wholesale District; Inbound and Outbound Freight Station on Ground Floor of Building; Club in Tower for Nation's Merchants.

Chicago, (Special),—Chicago is to have a gigantic Merchandise Mart housed in its own building, which will be twice the size of the largest business building in the world. This mammoth structure, two city blocks In length, 18 to 23 stories high, is planned for the service and convenlence of merchandise buyers of the United States and to achieve for Chicago a still greater presilge as a Great Central Market, it was declared today. It will cost $20,000,000. Construction will begin immediately. The project will be the large single development of air rights. The properly of the new building except for enissons begins 23 feet above "datem." The big business of the country Is now done mainly in conceptrated market places, na evidenced by the Carment Center and Cotton Goods Center in New York City, nutamobile rows in all leading cities, financial buildings, and the Furniture Mart in Chicago, where more than 700 furniucts side by side, in the most modern manner and under ideal conditions.

Business men have learned that the nearer they are to the centers of these market places, the greater is their opportunity for volume and profit The establishment of the Merchandise Matt is a dramatic development in the program to make Chicago the committee. Located on River. Front. This great Mart, which will house sales quarters and merchandise dis plays of several hundred of the couptry's foremost manufacturers, wholevalers and Importers, will be located in the rapidly developing new circr district, and will occupy a distinctly conspictions resition just across the river from Wacker Drive at Wells sirect, where the southern facade of the structure will be visible for blocks. The site was formerly that of the Chicago and North Western Itali-WAY Company's passenger station The building will extend 724 feet on Kinsie secret. 577 feet on the river front and 324 feet on Wells street, with a disconsi frontage facing Orleans and Franklin streets. It will be set back from the river about 80 feet to accommodule a broad upper level drive extending tress Wells to Franklin, The main entrance of the building will face the river and the drive.

The Merchandise Mart will have ! total floor space of about 4,000,000 square feet as compared with slight. ly less than 1,000,000 source fort. which is the loor area of the Furniture Mars the next largest building. lisch of the eighteen main floors will have an area of more than 200,000 MUNTE feet.

Within the walls of this huge edifice the relati merchants of the United States, Canada and foreign countries will be able to see, under one roof, hundreds of thes of the world's best merchandles. The manufactorers' exhibits will include lextiles, ready-to-wear, lays, lares, ployes, cornels, millinery, silverware, glass, rugs, kalt goods, bosiery, shoes, men's wear, fancy goods, sport goods, art and antiques, Jawelry, trunks, tellet articles, house fernishings, halve equipment and protes of either merchandise Hestaya. the local and most modern achieve-

Hard to Say Just Who Was "Father of Navy"

"The questions, 'Who was the father of the American navy? What was the first American worship and) what was the first sea fight in thehistory of the nation? are continually being raised," writes Prot. Walter-B. Norris of the United States Navat academy in Current History. "When the facts are clear it is useless and impossible to answer them absolutely. If Washington became the father of his country' simply because he was: its first President, then John Barry deserves the title for the navy, for he was its first commander appointed? directly by the congress. But if Washington was father of his country' because he was chiefly responsible for its foundation, then John Paul Jones deserves the honor in the navy. for, although there was no real head? of the navy during the Revolution, Jones suggested many of the lines on which it later developed and gave it traditions which have shaped its spirit ever since. . . . The first sea fight of the Revolution occurred on May 7,. 1775, in the waters of Vineyard sound, Massachusetts, when a band of minute men from Dartmouth went out ina schooner, the Success, and recaptured two vessels that had been selzed. Thus the Success must be called thefirst American warship, though it did? not have even the legal status of a-

bers of the army."

Awarded to Flanders The use of starch in the inundry began about 350 years ago, and is said to have originated in Flanders. It came into popularity in England inthe reign of Elizabeth, whose courtlers. and ladies were rulls of cambric toolarge to stand firm without artificial stiffening. The storch was like that of modern times except that it was colored-red, yellow, green, and blue--and gave delicate tints to the buge linen contrivances of the beaux and belies of the period.

privateer, and was manned by mem-

The method of using starch was a secret and in order to find a personwho could properly starch her linen. Queen Elizabeth was compelled tomake a nation-wide search and Mrs. Guilliam, wife of an official of the royal household, was the first starchery In 1504 a Flemish woman. Frau Vaudh Plasse, came to London and established there a school to teacis sturching. The school succeeded, and the fran of Flanders became rich.

Bananas and Wheat

A study made by a representativeof the Department of Agriculture in-Unwall shows that the banana leads in total production per acre and infuel value per acre. A fair yield of wheat is estimated at 1.620 pounds per nere. In the banana it is 32,000 pounds per acre. And the comparative fuel values from an acre are 2,-673,000 calories for wheat and 8,320,-000 for bananas. Of rice, corn, whiteand sweet potutoes, the nere yield of sweet pointoes, with 0,160,000 calories, approaches closest to the banana. Of the fruits the banana is much the cichest in protein, having approximately four and one-balf times as large a proportion as the apple and nearly fivetimes the placample.

Bullet and Air in Films

When a speeding bullet crashes through an electric light bolb it dents the glass before it plows its way through the white fragments of glass floating in the air. Air moves intosome airplane cylinders at the rate of 42 feet a second. These facts were shown by use of the camera invented by Baron Shiba, a Japanese engineer. The camera made 20,000 exposures a minute and the films were thrown on the screen as slow-motion pictures. Every detail of the bullet's flight as though the missile was traveling slowly, was shown.

Alfalfa. Cultivation

Historical accounts indicate that alfolfa was first cultivated in Persia and that the Perslans took it with them when they invaded Greece about 490 B. C. to provide forage for the horses and cattle of their armies. It was apparently introduced into Italy during the First century and into Spain during the Moorish invasion in the Eighth century. The Spanlards took alfalfa to South America and Mexico in the Sixteenth century and doubtless to California and the Southwest during their first expeditions.

Why Hair Has Lost Uses Woman's crowning glory is really a most important organs of the body. Monday. according to a doctor writing in Physical Culture Magazine. "Primitive man," this authority points out, "was entirely covered with hair. The only hairless parts his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. M. A. of his body were the palms of his Howard. hands and the soles of his feet. Hair served to keep blm warm in the winter and cool in summer. When if rained, the long outer hairs turned water as well as an army slicker. When engaged in combat, the slippery hair often turned aside a blow which otherwise might have been direct and fatal. In short, halr served our ancestors as both clothing and armor. Today, It has degenerated into a mere appendage of adornment."

Silly Idea Prevalent

That Idleness Is Sing America is the only country in the world where idleness is one of the seven deadly sins, according to Irwin Edman, novelist and essayist, writing' in Unrper's.

"With us leisure has been a melodramatic escape into excitement," he points out, "or a moralistic flight into self-improvement. We oscillate between night clubs and outlines of culture. Every one has at some time or other been present at a determinedly gay party. He has seen ordinarily quiet, intelligent reople become willfully nolsy and stupid. He has seen men and women, separately delightful and entertaining, prance about, loudly screaming vulgarities, acting like grown-up bables of the age. And his pain has been increased by a sense that none of these people cared to do the silly things they were doing. They drank more than they really wished to, and attered biccoughing nonsense that they themselves despised.

"Every one, likewise, has listened to a group of people at dinner or afterward, talk with obligatory boredom about the modish books and plays and ideas. Spontaneity, which is the essence of any truly spiritual life, files out of the conversation and out of the window when 'culture' becomes deliberate."

"What's that?" "Oh, is that you, Unitle? I thought at Arst It was my sister."

"Yes, this is Huttle." He thought he detected a little ice in her voicehe wasn't just sure-but he thought so, "I wish that on the way home you'd stop in the market and bring home that salt mackerel I ordered. The clerk told me it would be a late delivery and I wanted it for supper,"

Why Tinkering Habit

Has Been of Benefit Roys usually become acquainted with the implements of man's tonsorial activities by finding father's razors and razor blades useful pencil sharpeners and cutters. Then they learn of the makeshift use for the razor strop. But "like father, like son" for the tinkering instinct of the masculine continues into manhood's estate with the result that we have inventora, designera, ortista, etc.

This tinkering instinct has led to the discovery that razor bludes, because of their high cutting qualities. make excellent machine knives for the cutting of hard rubber rings or bushings used in the manufacture of telephone equipment. For years this had been a bothersome process because ordinary cutting tools dulled quickly and also left a bure or rough edge on the rubber rings. This burr had to be subsequently removed by another operation. Then an engineer, tinkering in his home inboratory, found that by heating rubber and employing his used blades he could cut rubber rings cleanly and quickly. This led to the assembling of a machine which will cut off 325 perfect bushings per minute. One telephone company alone uses as high as 70,000,000 bushings a year.

Model T Fords

Expenditure of few dollars may enable you to get thousands of miles from your old car

THE Model T Ford is still a great car. It led the motor industry for twenty years and it is used today by more people than any other automobile. More than eight million Model T Fords are in active service in city, town and country, and many of them can be driven for two, three and five years and even longer at very small up-keep expense.

The cost of Model T parts and of necessary labor is unusually low because of established Ford policies.

New fenders, for instance, cost from $3.50 to $5 each, with a labor charge of $1 to $2.50. Tuning up the motor and replacing commutator case, brush and vibrator points costs only $1, with a small charge for material. Brake shoes can be installed and emergency brakes equalized for a labor charge of only $1.25. A labor charge of $4 to $5 will cover the overhauling of the front axle, rebushing springs and spring perches, and straightening, aligning and adjusting wheels.

The labor charge for overhauling the average rear axle runs from $5.75 to $7. Grinding valves and cleaning carbon can be done for $3 to $4.

A set of four new pistons costs only $7. For a labor charge of $20 to $25 you can have your motor and transmission completely overhauled. Parts are extra-

All of these prices are approximate, of course, because the cost of materials needed will depend on the condition of each car. They show, however, the low cost of putting the Model T Ford in shape for thousands of miles of additional service.

See the nearest Ford dealer, therefore, and have him estimate on the cost of re-conditioning your Model T Ford. He will tell you, in advance, exactly how much the complete job will cost.

ELIA BORDEN lny curled up in the porch hammock. She had been sleeping, but voices had aroused her. She listened moment drowally, then her senses ecame keente niert as she realized hat the two women who were passing the house were discussing her. Ills neeped through the vines. One of the women was Mrs. Banks, her next door neighbor; the other woman she ald not know.

"It is a shame!" Mrs. Banks was saying in her high-pitched voice. "This place used to be the best kent one n this street. The Bordens have ived here going on nine years and they've never done a thing to the house but patch it. It looks like a creay quilt."

"What seems to be the trouble?" the irange woman usked.

"Why, John Borden is a failure; there's no doubt or that. I suppose when a man's a failure nothing can make him succeed, but then John tesn't any help in his wife. Delia Borden is slack. She didn't used to ic, but she just seems to linve lost er grip. It's hard to believe sometimes, but I think a man usually redects his wife—"

The two women moved out of hear-

Della rose to her feet. Her knees rembled. Mrs. Banks had called John fallure. She had blamed her, For he first time she knew what people thought of her husband, her home, erself. Had Mrs. Banks spoken the ruth? The old house was ugly with is patched roof and scaling paint, surrounded by its yard filled with acglected shrubbery. It loomed large n the row of smart, well-cared-for csidences set in neutly clipped lawns. very one around them had progressed thile she and John had seemed to retgrade. John was still barely holding to his job with old Mr. Grant just there he land commenced eleven years go. Mr. Grant in turn was clinging o a wornout business. John had icked initiative to look for something better. At first she had been hopeful that John would succeed; lately she had given up and accepted things as they were. She had even fallen into neglecting her home, her person. She coked down at her stubbed-out shoes and solled dress. Had John noticed? flad he, too, felt something of what the had just heard? Certain things he had said came to her with hard revelation. Did he know that theycruel hurt it sho chould lose his love!

Della went into the house and began to busy herself with preparations for lunch. She worked furlously cleanng the dining room. She set the table with a clean cloth and her best dishes. She changed her dress and put on her best pair of pumps. Her thoughts dwelt upon the altention that had pre-

JOHN NEEDED A BOOST

(C by D. J. Walsh.)

ELIA BORDEN lay curled up in the porch hammock. She had been sleeping, but voices had aroused her. She listened moment drowslly, then her senses ecame kéents alert as she realized hat the two women who were passing the house were discussing her. Itising cautiously on her clow she peeped through the vines. One of he women was Mrs. Banks, her next door neighbor; the other woman she dld not know.

"It is a shame!" Mrs. Banks was saying in her high-pitched voice. "This place used to be the best kept one n this street. The Bordens have ived here going on nine years and they've never done a thing to the house but patch it. It looks like a crezy quilt."

"What seems to be the trouble?" the irange woman asked.

"Why. John Borden is a failure; here's no doubt or that. I suppose when a man's a failure nothing can nake him succeed, but then John asn't any help in his wife. Delia forden is slack. She didn't used to e, but she just seems to have lost her grip. It's hard to believe someimes, but I think a man usually redects his wife-"

The two women moved out of hear-

Della rose to her feet. Her knees rembled. Mrs. Banks had called John falture. She had blamed ber, For, he first time she knew what people thought of her husband, her home, berself. Had Mrs. Banks spoken the truth? The old house was ugly with is patched roof and scaling paint, surrounded by its yard filled with neglected shrubbery. It loomed large n the row of smart, well-cared-for esidences set in neatly clipped lawns. Every one around them had progressed while she and John had seemed to retregrade. John was still barely holding en to his job with old Mr. Grant just where he had commenced eleven years ago. Mr. Grant in turn was clinging to a wormout business. John had lacked initiative to look for something better. At first she had been hopeful that John would succeed; lately she had given up and accepted things as they were. She had even fallen into neglecting her home, her person. She looked down at her stubbed-out shoes and solled dress. Had John noticed? flad he, too, felt comething of what she had Just heard? FOODS IN THE DAILY DIET

By E. V. McCollum, Ph. D., Sc.D.

Author of "The Newer Knowledge of Nutrition," "Food, Nutrition and Health," etc., Professor of Bio-chemistry, School of Hygiene, School of Hygiene and Public Health, Johns Hopkins University.

DURING the last twenty years pioneers needed was a more varied a remarkably clean bill of health. oxygen is used up in tissue respiramade in our knowledge of quality in foods, and of the nutritive needs of the body. We know in terms of chemical substances what constitutes an adequate diet. We know, in the case of nearly all of our more common and important foods, and with a fair degree of accuracy, which months or even years, thus making nutrient principles are abundant or it possible for people to have a deficient in each. It has been found, greater variety in the diet the whole as our studies have progressed, that year through. Caming, dehydration most of our ordinary funds which constitute the staple articles of our diet are one-sided in composition. One will contain an excess of certain executed food and cold storage are the principal means by which foods are preserved during the season of excess production, to be used mainly during the tothe boiling point of water or even cause the disappearance of dissolved ture may be an excellent diet.

Foods Must Be Varied

All this is by way of saying that a diet restricted to a few articles, and monotonous in character, is likely to be unsatisfactory for the maintenance of health. The keynote to successful nutrition is the proper combination of foods. There are many illustrations in human nutrition of people suffering from ill health as a result of subsisting during the winter months on a diet of poor quality. Such an experience was common a generation or two ago when the middle west was being settled. Ready money was very scarce and the great objective of the farmers on their new homesteads was to produce crops which could be sold so that farm equipment, fences and buildings could be pur-chased. Often they subsisted during the winter season principally on refined wheat flour bread, molasses, and fat pork. Those were the times when everyone felt ill in the spring, People thought their blood became impure during the winter season and that they needed blood purifiers and other spring medicines. They took the patent medicines offered them by numerous quacks, but at the to get green grass, produced milk.

Science Comes to the Rescue

Science has come to the assistance of mankind in providing ways by which foods may be preserved for One will contain an excess of certain essential food elements, and lack a sufficient amount of others. It has become evident that we must not condemn any food-stuff because it is not in itself a complete food. If two foods, or several foods, each lacking in one or more indispensable food elements are combined in the proper proportions, one may furnish what another lacks, and so the misture may be an excellent diet.

tion, to be used mainly during the part of the year when otherwise we should be reduced to a simple and monotonous diet. A long list of fruits and green vegetables are most effectively preserved in a whole-some and attractive form, and for an almost indefinite period if though the heating is only carried to 143-145 degrees Fahrenheit. Cooking of fruits and vegetables, meats, milk, etc., are also best put up in this form. No other method meats, milk, etc., are also best put practice is known to destroy in up in this form. No other method great measure the scurvy-preventing

In the early history of the canning industry, before methods were fully understood, there was considerable loss due to inadequate processes. Some canners used pre-servatives so that interior products could be packed without danger of financial loss. Canned foods came to be looked upon with suspicion by many. That day is now past. There is no industry with which we are familiar which has been more alert in the study of the science underly-vitamin C during cooking is exidation, ing the packing of foods in airtight. Recent researches by Kohman and Eddy have brought to light some very interesting facts about the nutritive values of several canned foods. They have shown that there are certain features about the canning processes which make them far less destructive of vitamin

The vitamin C' content of commercially canned fruits and vegecause the disappearance of dissolved oxygen in their substance. By ordinary cooking this vitamin is essen-tially all destroyed, yet by the special treatment previous to strong heat treatment the destruction may be avoided.

What we have said regarding ordinary cooking of foods probably also applies to foods which are home canned, although no studies have as yet been conducted which would show the extent to which vitamin C is destroyed in home canning. The heat is in general probably applied too rapidly to permit of saving the vitamin from destruction.

Results of Nutritional Research

Canned foods have steadily grown in favor with the consuming public for many years, mainly because of the excellence of the state of preservation and the attractiveness of their flavors and appearance. In no branch of the food industry has the results of scientific investigation been more effectively applied than in the canning industry. reason why canned foods are as safe as any foods we eat, and safer than a number of common foods which are purchased fresh but are handled periments. Extensive excavations have been made on the site of the ftoman fork at Mumrills, Laurieston, near Balkiek, Scotland, and it has been rerenible that the site was occupied by wood erections before the Romans comstructed the stone buildings represented by the exposed foundations? Interspersed among the foundations, at regular short intervals, are numurous "post holes." The wood has long since disappeared. Besides the postholes, and having apparently a refation to them, some fire "hearths" have been found.

He also loaned her n pair of cotton gloves to protect her hands from the paint, but these she hastly discarded. They impeded her progress. > LIDA'S LOVE FOR BLUE

T WAS Lida's first day in the dress goods. Bhe had worked for three years in the kitchenware, until she had come to feel a personal acquaintance with every utensil in the department, and double-bollers and jelly-strainers bad come to be a very vital part of her existence. The transfer came as a complete surprise, although it made little difference to Lida. Nothing made any difference. There had been a time when she had aspired to a buyership. but that had been while her mother was living, and there had been a real Incentive. But Lida's mother had been dend place Morch and there was no longer annual interested in her success. And because Idda was so very lonely, she had ceased to care herself. Her sales in the dress goods for the first day were not very large. Her fingers were bungling, and she was hopelessly slow in measuring off the materials for impatient buyers. She wondered how long they would keep her there. But the second day showed some improvement, and soon Lida's sales mounted even higher than Aliss Bolond's, who had rold dress goods for ever to many years more than Lida had sold kitchenware. One day they received a new shipment of materials, and f.ida unrolled n bolt of heavenly blue tageta. It had a beautiful shimmer of silver and was exquisitely sell to the touch. All her life Lida had hoved some day to possess just such a dress-a gorgeous, shimmery blue. Dive was Lida's color.

The material was very popular. All day Ada measured off great lengths of it and the bolt dwindled rapidly The more Lida measured of it, the more she came to love it. The softness, the exquisiteness of it: its silver shimmer and its daintiness seemed to represent all that had been lacking in Lida's life. There were only are yards left on the bolt when the last customer turned away, Just before closing time. Hestiantly, almost lovingly, Lida smoothed out the soft. instrous folds. One more customer and the last of the levely material would be gone. Lida's mind was very suddenly made up. Of course, she had no use in the world for such a dress, but perhaps some day . .

And she turned to the supervisor. "May 1-could I"-she faltered, but the supervisor seemed to understand at once what she wanted. "How many yards are there left?" he asked. "Five," replied Lida.

"Then you had better take it right off the bolt. It won't last long in the morning, you know. And I doubt If we will get any more in, in that same color. Pretty, lan't 11?"
"Oh, lovely!" exulted Lida, "My

"Mine, too," smiled the supervisor. "You can just wrap that and take it with you tonight, Miss Unnier. 131 algn your allp to the morning." "Oh, thank you," glowed Lida, and she bugged the brown paper package all the way home in the crowded car, Her heart felt strangely lighter than It had been in all those lonely months since March, Was it Just because spring was coming, or was it the bine allk, she wondered. And then she fell to thinking of the supervisor, He was quite young to have attained to a supervisorship. And what a pleasant amile he had! She wondered vacuely if he might be married, and then chided herself for being so fool-

The next week the spring sales begao, and business in the silks increased to amazing proportions. Lida worked tremendously hard and was too tired in the evenings to do anything else but read the paper and go to bed. She hadn't even time through the day to choose a pattern for the blue dress. The material lay in its brown paper grappings in her top bureau drawer. Once or twice she had taken it out and held the soft, shimmering folds against her, and land dushed softly at sight of her reflection in the mirror. Why, sho was almost pretty!

The sales went back to normal the next week, and on Tuesday Llda used her pass to go to the pattern department. She found precisely what she wanted, and the dress came to be a lovely finished thing in her mind's eye. Of course, she reflected, she was ofterly faoilsh to buy such an impractical dress, but it was nice to possess something pretty, even if one had no need for it. But she wondered at the frong of fate when the management the next day announced the date of the em ployees' annual donce. The employces' annual dance meant not a thing to Lida. There had been four since she had been in the employ of the company and she had not once been asked. The whole floor was buzzing with excitement, and it was orident that nearly everybody was going. Lida measured off pards and yards of slike white Alles Boland and Miss Atkins discussed it. She heard Miss Boland say she was going to wear cerise. THE OLD WEED

WOMAN

UNA BORDEN was bending over her strawberry bed hunting for the first ripe berries. It she was successful in her search she was going to make a shortcake. She had just discovered a stem of lusclous, big red berries when she heard some one coming into her garden, Turning, she saw Mrs. More, ber neighbor from across the way, "I just stopped in on my way to town. Cuna, to see It there was any errand I could do for you," and then as her eyes fell on the berries she exclaimed: "Ripe strawberries! Cons. warmer in your yard than anywhere It has been a real joy to have to else on this street. But all the same John says there is no law in this village that can compel a man to clean as she sows. She had rend that Pineville had been visited by a drought, thinning an old slicker and not walttur to put anything on her head she ran downstates and out of the house. A moment later she atood staring in sciatement at what she saw. Her garden was as neal and well cared for as if she had not been away even for one day. Her fountoes were carefully trimmed and staked op. Her flowers had not suffered from the drought. That meant that some one had watered them. There was not a weed to be seen. The hollyhorks had grown tall and thick. They were covered with a wealth of brilliant bloom, They completely bid the adjoining yard. good-natured laugh, "then 1 guess you'll have better luck guessing," and still smiling, Mrs, More turned and ran home, Cunn parted a big bunch of hollytooks and peeped through into the next yard. She gave an exclamation of surprise. She actually rubbed the rain out of her ceys because she thought she was not seeing right. Old Mrs. Kerr's yard was as well trimmed as her own. The grass had been clipped until it was as smooth as velvet. There was not a weed in sight. What did it mean? Cunn must find out. A moment later she was knocking at old Mrs. Kerr's back door. Almost instantly the door expeed and the old lady ap-

"Come in, child," Mrs. Kerr threw open the door and Cuna entered the tiny kitchen, which was filled with where he has been working in a saw an appetizing odor of brewing coffee mill. and browning toust. "Just sit ye down and have a snack of breakfast with me and I'll tell you all about it. I've had the picest time. The only really I resolved I'd destroy them the first chance I got. The day you went away. I went out there with sickle and spading fork. I meant to do damage, but just as I was pressing my foot to the spading fork by glasses dropped off. I was just stooping to pick them up when I found myself looking straight into the face of the prettiest yellow pansy I'd ever seen since I was a little girl. My mother always had a bed of pansles and there was one particular yellow kind that I loved. I hadn't thought of 'em since she died-but there it was looking me straight in the eye. I-well-I just couldn't hurt it by destroying your plants—1 got kinda in the habit of going out there mornings to see that it was all right. It was kinda company and I fell to weeding and when the drought came I carried out water so things wouldn't dry up. Then the flowers looked so sorta distressed by the side of the weeks in my yard that I had Able Cole come and clean up my yard. I thought it would be good for 'em to let the sun in from my side of the line. Well, one thing led to another

"Until," Cuna interrupted. Her eyes were glistening, "Until, you old dear, you did the nicest possible thing you could have done-or anyone could, for that matter. I'll never forget it as long as I live."

"Neither will I," old Mrs. Kerr's eres too were moist. And that was how "The Old Weed Woman" of Pink street lost her title and Plak street won a neighbor and
